3. Special card files are kept for specialist personnel of combat units, both in the military sectors and in the military precincts. The card files bear the designation VES (Military Records - Specialty) followed by a number such as 1, 2, 3, etc. This indicates specialization, as in infantry, artillery, etc. The designation VES-1 indicates the card file where records on infantry riflemen are kept. There are a great many of these. Because there are few persons qualified for the various technical, mechanized and motorized units, the infantry riflemen are entered on the rosters of combat units as replacements. As a result of this system for cadre replacement in technical, mechanized, motorized and other special units, draftees are not called up for training by year groups but as the need arises for qualified personnel for the various VES in a given unit or specialty. Other draftees besides infantry riflemen whose cards appear in VES-1 and those who performed their military service in 1948 and 1949 are called up for specialized training but these must have been assigned to special units as replacements to be eligible under this VES-1 classification.
4. Records kept in the military precinct (otsek) include the following:
- a. Lists of all eligibles assigned to the military precinct in question;
  - b. A card file for all specialized personnel, which bears the designation VES. In this way an accurate record is always available of the number of specialists plus an indication of where and in what unit they are assigned.

The military precinct does not keep any lists of combat units. It is informed, through the quota sent by the military sector, how many and what kind of personnel it is to supply to a given unit. According to the numerical strength of the unit the precinct is instructed, for example, to furnish Unit No. XY with the number of specialized personnel indicated. If, however, there are not enough specialized personnel for this unit, replacements are assigned who will later be called up for specialist training.
